Mr. Arnold Sounds Off

An Editorial of Two Years Ago

Newspapers this week-end headlined the testimony of Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold before the house judiciary committee Saturday as "a New Deal attack upon labor unions." But I think you will find Mr. Arnold was simply speaking for Mr. Arnold.

The New Deal is a coalition government comprising enthusiastic labor unions on the one hand and considerably-less-enthusiastic farmers on the other. And when the leather pinches real tight it is union labor that gets a new pair of shoes and it is the rest of the country that goes bare-foot.

This is about as good a place as any to clear up a few things. The administration presents itself as the friend of union labor, in a day when the right of American workmen to organize is universally recognized. Unionism itself is no issue. But where unionism is applied IS AN ISSUE.

The government has encouraged and abetted union organizations in vital National Defense plants, and countenanced extortionate wage increases that the people as taxpayers must eventually pay.

The same week-end that Thurman Arnold was making his precious talk before the house judiciary committee the CIO was publishing demands upon General Motors Corporation for dollar-a-day wage increases—with additional increases every 90 days. General Motors, now making no automobiles or refrigerators, presumably is manufacturing 100 per cent for National Defense.

What Labor and Capital do to each other in the struggle for private profit is nobody's business but their own. But what either of them does to the other in Defense industries they do against the common good—even the actual safety and liberty of this, their own country, America.

And they do it with the connivance of the prevailing government. On June 14, 1940, the day Paris fell before the oncoming German barbarians, I wrote a critical editorial on American government. I keep reading pieces in the press today about "Wake Up America—It Is Late."

But how late you may not really know—until you recall that this editorial was written nearly two years ago, and until you measure how little our government's internal policy has changed despite its constant warnings that we are in danger abroad.

Here is that Star editorial of two years ago—June 14, 1940:

Collapse of France
Nations Lose From the Inside
Exactly five weeks from the day the Germans started their "total war" Paris is captured, France is hinting surrender—and it begins to look more like a French collapse than a German victory. It was Friday, May 10, that the Nazis invaded Holland. This is Friday, June 14—five weeks later—and the Germans are in Paris. A world power like France isn't conquered in five weeks—if it happens, it happens from the inside. And France today stands as a deadly warning to all citizens of every democratic country on earth.

You need only recall the newspaper history of France since the last war to understand what was going on behind the scenes in Paris.

The French after 1918 were "top-dogs" in Europe. They had what was supposed to be the No. 1 army of the world. They had a fleet second only to Britain's in Europe. They had a gold reserve second only to the United States—and per capita France had actually more gold than anybody.

And what did France do between two world wars? Her people quarreled among themselves, class against class, industry against industry, each seeing which could get the most out of the government. Cabinet after cabinet rose and fell, crushed by the impossible task of asking government to take care of the people, when it is the people who have to take care of government.

France had millions of pensioners, and those who did work for a living worked precious few hours. It was the way the French people wanted it—and Paris was a pleasant place to live. . . . civilized people in a civilized land. And then the barbarians came.

There is an ancient parallel you know about. Rome ruled the world for 500 years. But the Romans grew old and lazy and corrupt. They allowed their politicians to buy the voters with free corn. . . . And one day the barbarians came down—of all places!—out of this same Germany and took Rome and burned it and reduced the Romans to slaves.

I am tired of hearing these modern Germans called "supermen." They put their pants on like other men. History simply says of Old Rome: "The city had grown old and corrupt, and the barbarians came down out of the hills and

Bulgarian King to Confer With German Heads

Will Discuss His Country's Part in Nazi Spring Offensive

BERN, Switzerland (AP)—King Boris of Bulgaria was reliably reported en route to Berlin Monday to discuss Bulgaria's job with the Axis armies on the middle east front this spring and his country's ambition to become the guardian power of the Balkans. He is expected to confer with Hitler and Hitler's ace diplomat Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey who is enroute to a conference with the Fuehrer.

conviction that Bulgaria would enter the war actively if Turkey became involved and Turkey is Rumania's traditional enemy. An attempted Axis drive this spring to gain oil fields at Baku and the use of the Dardanelles would bring Turkey to the necessity of choosing whether to fight to yield concessions to the Axis.

Italian propaganda ministry spokesmen acknowledged the presence in Bulgaria of considerable number of Axis troops. Bulgaria also has been used as a winter base for the repairs of planes and other equipment damaged on the Russian front.

Work of improving airports and roads leading to the Turkey border began more than a year ago when the first German troops entered the country and carried on steadily since that time.

Black sea ports likewise have been improved.

British Sink 10 Italian Ships in Mediterranean

Submarine Attack Within Sight of Coast of Southern Italy

LONDON (AP)—British submarines striking with torpedoes and shell fire within sight of watchers on the coast of Italy and her Albania vassal state have sunk two Italian submarines, two supply ships, 6 schooners and a troop-laden motor ship, the admiralty announced Monday.

The blows to Italy's sea lanes hammered home at approaches to the Strait of Messina, between the southern tip of Italy and Sicily, under machinegun fire from Italy's southeast coast and under artillery fire from Albanian coastal batteries.

The admiralty did not specify the time of these operations. Neither was there any mention of British losses.

The Italian submarines, both sunk in southern Italian waters, were identified by the admiralty as the new Ammiraglio Milla and one of the Argonauta class.

The Ammiraglio Milla, a 288 foot, 1,661 ton craft, was completed since the start of the war as one of the newest and largest ships to the Duce's undersea fleet.

The Argonauta class craft was one of seven ships built from 1931 to 1932. Submarines of this class are about 200 feet long and range from 599 to 778 tons.

Three times during the attack Italian shore fire and airplanes interfered with attempts by British submarines to pick up survivors, the admiralty said.

Franks, Ruggles Are Elected

Charley Wilson Member of County Education Board

Clifford Franks was re-elected Hope school director and W. B. Ruggles was named to succeed A. A. Albritton, retiring director, in Saturday's school election—which polled a grand total of 27 votes.

Charley Wilson of Columbus was elected member-at-large of the County Board of Education.

Hope electors voted the 18-mill maximum school tax.

As now constituted the Hope School Board is: E. P. Young, president; Clifford Franks, secretary; Syd E. McMill, R. M. LaGrone, Jr., Ched Hall and W. B. Ruggles.

Employers Urged to Help Classify Men

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director, advised employers over the week-end to take stock of the men on their payrolls and decide "what you can spare and what you need."

"Production of war equipment and food and civilian activities must go on," he told the state convention of Junior Chambers of Commerce. "There will be a scarcity of people to do the job and it means that everyone must work harder and longer if we are to accomplish the things that must be done."

Capacity Crowd Hears Campbell

Tabernacle Reports Growing Interest in Revival

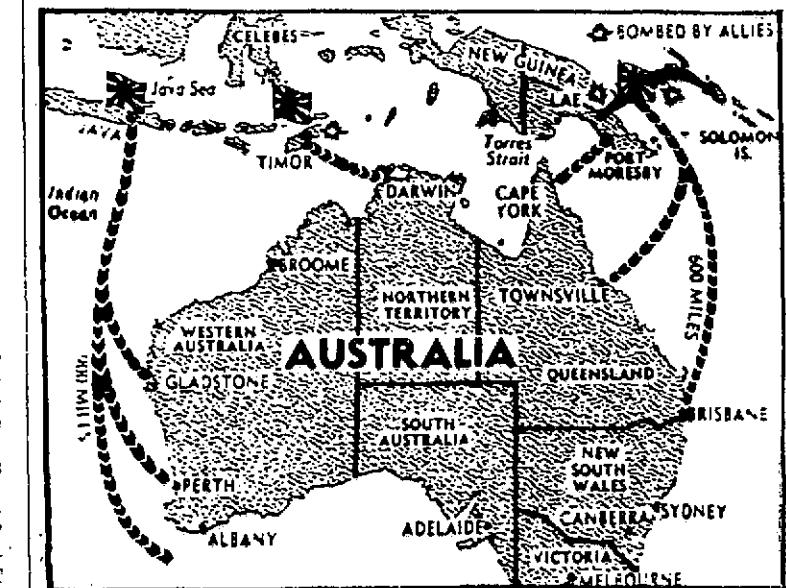

The main auditorium of the Hope Gospel Tabernacle was filled to capacity Sunday night to hear Evangelist Bird H. Campbell speak on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." The evangelist emphasized the dual personality on man, and urged men to resist the voice of the flesh and yield to the voice of the soul.

Monday night's program has been designated as musical night, with Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Mays, Mrs. J. E. Hamill, the Tabernacle Quartet, Ladies chorus and others appearing on the program. The evangelist will speak Monday night on "The Command to Advance."

With Sunday's services the Tabernacle revival went into the second week, with services scheduled for every night this week, except Saturday, beginning at 7:45 o'clock. A Sunday school drive was perfected Sunday morning which is believed will bring as many as 600 into the Tabernacle Sunday School on Easter Sunday.

Negro Soldier Shot to Death

Shooting Follows Scrap With Little Rock Police

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A negro soldier identified by Camp Robinson authorities as Sgt. Thomas B. Foster, 30, Zebulon, N. C., was fatally wounded by City Patrolman A. J. Hay Sunday night in what detective Chief O. N. Martin, described as an unsuccessful attempt to liberate another negro from the custody of civilian and military police.

Foster died at a Little Rock hospital several hours later. He was shot three times in the abdomen and once in the arm.

School Buying Saving Stamps

Average at Rocky Mound Is $5.43 Per Student

For about two and one half months the students of the Rocky Mound School three miles east of Hope have, according to D. O. Silvey, principal, been investing their dimes and quarters in Saving Stamps.

No special drive has been made, but the interest has remained constant resulting in about the same amount of sales each week over the period. With two exceptions, all families represented in the school have one or more children with Stamp books. Students have purchased from two stamps to a twenty-five dollar bond.

The average per student is $5.43 and the students of Rocky Mound School are determined to do their part to "Keep 'em Flying." The goal there now is to have 6 or 10 bonds in the hands of that many students by the close of the term.

The members of the Publicity Committee and Royce Weisenberger, Cooperative Division Chairman of the Hempstead County Defense Savings Staff, urge that reports of the work in each school in the county be made in order that we may all know what the others are doing to "Keep 'em Flying."

Okay Union Contract Gives Pay Increases

Cement Workers Local Union No. 102 of Okay, Ark., recently completed negotiations for a new Working Agreement between the employees of the Arkansas Portland Cement company and the company. The new agreement becomes effective April 1, 1942, and continues in effect until April 1, 1943, the union announced.

Increases of 7c to 10c were granted the employees, retroactive to February 18, 1942.

The negotiating committee for the employees was composed of the following members of the local union: Fred McJunkins, Pers. A. R. Mobley, Vice-Pres.; Arthur H. Lott; E. W. Martin; and Louis F. Wells, Recording Secretary. 7th General Vice-President George H. Hassett of the United Cement, Lime & Gypsum Workers International Union assisted in the negotiations.

M. O. Matthews of Ada, Okla., manager of operations, and Superintendent M. M. Collins of Okay represented the company.

Warning Issued by Tire Board

Tire Supply Insufficient to Meet Local Demand

Dorsey McRae, Sr. chairman of the Hempstead County Rationing Board, issued an urgent appeal to the public Monday for understanding cooperation in "a situation that is very embarrassing as well as serious in the rationing of the different commodities which has been placed in our hands."

His statement placed special emphasis on the tire rationing program, declaring that there are now insufficient tires and retreading certificates allotted to the board to take care of many of the most essential wartime requirements in the country.

"There are some people in our county," he said, "who seem to be under the impression that we have an unlimited number of tires to ration, that for some unknown reason we are holding back or penalizing certain individuals or groups. Such is definitely not the case."

"We have in Hempstead county 44 truck and 15 passenger car tires and 13 retreading and recapping certificates per month based on our March quota. This aggregate is all that we have to take care of the needs in our county. When you try to reconcile this quota with the great number of commercial vehicles in the county it can readily be seen how serious our situation is."

The entire state was allotted only 3,300 tires, retreading, passenger and truck, for March, the Rationing Board chairman pointed out, compared to a total registration of 77,106 trucks and 15,000 trailers and thousands of passenger cars.

Court Affirms Adams Sentence

Must Die for Slaying Augusta Liquor Store Man

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The supreme court affirmed the death sentence of Ben Adams, 46, who was convicted in Woodruff circuit court of slaying Arthur Bowie, Augusta liquor store owner during an attempted robbery in May 1941.

Adams pleaded guilty to homicide but the jury convicted him of first degree murder.

Two other men Malcolm Adkins, 26, Oxford, Miss., and Arthur McCree, 29, Memphis, were sentenced to life imprisonment for their part in the slaying.

Two women charged with being implicated in the holdup killing were scheduled to face charges this week.

Week-End Toll in Battle for New Guinea Island

Cripps Arrives in India; Jap Attack on Russia Said Near

By the Associated Press
About half a-hundred Japanese planes stricken from the skies or wrecked around by bombing and strafing were marked up late Monday as the score of the last four days of Allied aerial counter offensive and anti-aircraft defense on the invasion approaches to Australia.

The conservative official reports on the action Friday, Saturday and Sunday provided a total of 44 planes destroyed or damaged, Monday's communique adding at least three to the list.

Two Japanese planes caught in the tempest of anti-aircraft fire at Port Moresby Monday appeared to have crashed outside that New Guinea city where damage from raids were declared slight and no casualties reported in what was described as the heaviest attack of the war there. The Japanese also attacked Wyndham in western Australia.

Over Timor
An Australian communique said that a Japanese fighter was shot down during a reconnaissance over Portuguese Timor about 300 miles off northwestern Australia and that Japanese prisoners at Dili were bombed. The result of the bombing could not be determined.

In their raid on Port Moresby the Japanese showed they retained a considerable striking power despite their week-end losses. The raiding force consisted of 19 bombers and three fighter planes.

In the broader realm of political military strategy days including arrival of Sir Stafford Cripps at New Delhi for a mission aimed at lining up India for full participation in the British Empire war effort probably through negotiation of independence of some form.

Cripps in India
Footnote of the Cripps arrival was Mahatma K. Gandhi's appeal that the search for policy not be applied in the defense of India. He wrote in his newspaper that a disavowal of any policy would allay anxiety of the Indian masses.

Another development was reported from Chungking that 10 million men from Japan, Formosa, Korea and occupied China were being mustered by the Japanese for attacks on Russian Siberia as soon as conditions are favorable. This force would be in addition to a huge Japanese army already deployed in Manchukuo and inner Mongolia, the Chinese said.

Significantly this assertion appeared in the Chinese communist newspaper which added that with Russia turning her major strength to battle with Germany in the west the international situation was becoming ideal for a Japanese attack on the Russians in the east.

The battle for Burma's gateway to India had become largely for air supremacy, the Japanese apparently having found in American and British fliers to great a threat to land forces were said by London sources to be rushing heavy plane reinforcements into China.

In the Philippines the United States and Philippine troops sent greetings to General MacArthur in his new command in the southwest Pacific and pledged to continue their fight for the Philippines with the same zeal and devotion they manifested under his direction.

The War Department's communique reported no Philippine land action but Tokyo reports via Berlin said the Japanese had broken through Bataan Peninsula defense lines and isolated many American troops.

Joel C. Broyles, Sr. Compliment the Joel C. Broyles, Jr.

An outstanding social event of the week was the lovely tea given Sunday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Joel C. Broyles, Sr. in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Joel C. Broyles, Jr. of New York City, who are popular visitors in the city.

Guests were received informally in the living room by the hostess, host, the guests of honor and Miss Nell Louise Broyles.

Flowering bulbs in shades of gold and white and violets were arranged in colorful bouquets throughout the living room. Mrs. Edwin J. McCabe presided in the second reception room and invited callers into the dining room.

The attractive tea table, laid with a beautiful lace cloth and ornamented with a handsome silver service, featured as its chief ornament a large crystal bowl containing pink snapdragons, narcissi, spirea and feverfew, the whole of which was illuminated by slender white tapers in crystal holders.

On the buffet was noted a large fan-shaped arrangement of white iris interspersed with dainty sprays of bridal wreath. Other spring blossoms were also featured in the floral decor.

Mrs. Dorsey McRae, Sr., Mrs. Ralph Rounton, and Mrs. Clyde Hill alternated at the silver service and were assisted in the serving courtesies by Miss Louise Haneagan, Miss Daisy Dorothy Heard, and Mrs. Thomas Purvis.

Mrs. Nellie B. Turner, Mrs. A. C. Whitehurst, and Mrs. R. L. Broach also assisted in extending the hospitality of the afternoon to the large number of friends who called during the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Carrigan had as their guest this week-end Miss Mary Delia Carrigan of Little Rock.

Tough Men Get Tough Metal

Tungsten Is Vital Metal in War Production

Wide World Features
STIBNITE, Idaho—If Stibnite looks like a ghost town to a tenderfoot it's because all the miners are down in the earth getting out tungsten.

You may not know it, stranger, but this mountain village away up in the everlasting hills of Idaho is mining to produce one-fourth of the nation's requirements of that vital defense metal by June.

It takes hard men to produce hard metal so tough it's used for cutting tools, armor plate, guns and projectiles.

These men at Stibnite are so hard they're hauling out ore concentrate over a back-breaking road that men of weaker fiber said couldn't be kept open.

The snow is four feet deep on the level, if you can find any level spot. Two men froze to death in the area this winter.

Before the Bradley Mining Co. a San Francisco concern, got its winter operations underway the skeptics said a new road would have to be built, a road that would cost $1,000,000.

It's 80 miles from Stibnite to the railroad at Cascade, in Idaho's mountainous and misnamed Valley country that's still away up in the air. About 30 tons of metal comes out over that 80 miles every day.

By June the company expects to double its output, have 250 or 300 men working instead of 150 and get out 200,000 units of tungsten concentrate per month. That's about 240,000 pounds of tungsten ore.

Germans Still Strong in Russia After 9 Months of War and cinnabar, too.

Gold and silver are there, also, but those ordinarily precious metals aren't so important in war time. Stibnite is no grass-roots, get-rich-and-get-out diggings. Its more ardent backers say there is enough ore blocked out to keep the trucks hauling ore until Lend Lease is worn down to a button. And that's more than a mile high, mister.

In Alaska both pay and living costs average somewhat higher than in the United States.

CHAPTER XXXV

"PEYTON, you're not worth the shot it would take to kill you, but—I'll speak to Drake."

"Geel! In a little while I ought to be able to clear enough to take care of that debt to the St. George estate—if I'm not found out in the meantime. But the thing that scares me—"

"What?"

"Just lately Fulmer Green has had something to do with the St. George properties. He's got an eye on the real estate business around here, too. He may know something."

"Heaven pity you if he gets on your trail. I'll see what Drake can do to help you out financially right away."

"This means a lot, Parris. Peyton stood up. 'Now I want to tell you something about that attack in the Chronicle.'"

"All right, go on."

"Fulmer Green was behind it. He had some advance information about the proposal to buy, and he tried to get an option on the place himself. Then he found out you and Drake owned it."

"I see," Parris spoke evenly, but he was turning cold inside.

"He really owns a controlling interest in the Chronicle but nobody knows it. He backed Wardlaw so he'd have a paper behind his political career."

"Thanks, Peyton. You ought to be a detective."

After Peyton had gone, Parris called Fulmer Green.

"That you, Fulmer? Parris Mitchell. I want to talk to you right away—no, I won't come over there. No! Tomorrow won't do. Be here at the hospital in half an hour. Don't make it longer."

PEYTON walked blindly down the long avenue from the main building of the hospital to its tall gates. He was terribly confused.

Reaching his office, he switched on the light and sat down at his desk, confidence returning with familiar surroundings. His glance fell on a long envelope. It was a special delivery letter, mailed in Kings Row that afternoon.

Peyton read the three short paragraphs at a glance, knowing what they said almost without reading them. This finished him. Too late for Parris to help. Or Drake...

they walked across the hills, and through the yellow autumn fields. He watched her as she talked. The half-stately phrases of her careful English had a special charm. It reminded him of his grandmother's speech.

"Dr. Mitchell, I must ask you a question."

"All right."

"The first time you came here, when you came up on the terrace, you asked me if my name was Renee. Why did you think that might be my name?"

"I think I was startled by the way you looked."

"Like someone named Renee?"

"I was a small boy. She lived on the place—in the overseer's house."

"What became of her?"

A look, like a sudden shadow, crossed his face. Elise had seen the expression before.

"It was long ago." The shadow lay on his face again, and Elise said no more. They climbed a barbed-wire fence, and Elise tore her skirt. He had helped her over the fence, and still held her hand.

THAT winter Parris set about organizing his notes and his published articles into a book. The work proved more difficult than he had expected, and as a consequence he saw very little of Randy and Drake or of the Sandors. He planned to go to Vienna in May for final consultation with the board of editors.

One evening Randy called him rather late.

"I want to see you, Parris. Could you come down?"

Randy met him at the corner. "Drake's sick, Parris."

"What's wrong?"

"He's in a great deal of pain. In his hip. He's been complaining some all winter. But I thought it was fatigue. He stayed propped up to long at a time. That's what Dr. McNeill thought, too."

"Does Drake—did he tell Drake anything?"

"No. But he left a sedative. Drake's easier just now."

Parris found Drake half asleep, but tossing restlessly.

His interview with Dr. McNeill confirmed his fears.

"Of course, Dr. Mitchell, there must be a consultation. But I'm fairly sure."

"It's not—?" Parris choked a little and cleared his throat. Dr. McNeill sensed the question.

"An operation would be useless."

"How long?"

Dr. McNeill shrugged doubtfully. "I don't give him more than six months—maybe less."

sacked it."

"They had no smart writers in ancient days to coin all sorts of words like 'supermen'—and history was written hard and true."

How could Germany, disarmed and broke, rise to power in a few years under Hitler?

A friend of mine quoted Eddie Rickenbacker, American World War ace who is now president of Eastern Airlines, as saying:

"Any nation can rise whose people are willing to work 70 hours a week."

But Eddie Rickenbacker was only paraphrasing the idea behind America herself.

Our forefathers started with nothing. They built the greatest nation on earth.

But today we are relaxed—at least we were relaxed until events in Europe scared the daylight out of us.

Let us study the tragedy of France and resolve to make it an object lesson for our own republic.

Our pioneers days are behind us. And that is our great danger.

For it was Benjamin Franklin who said: "It is easier to build two chimneys than to keep one in fuel."

It is not so exciting running a house after it is built.

But if we don't run it, keep it defended, keep its bills paid—then we can look at France and know what will happen to ourselves.

India and the War

When Columbus sailed away from Genoa that memorable day in three overseas lifetimes, he sailed in search of India, a mysterious land of fabulous wealth. The kings and queens of Europe needed that land to keep their wars going and their treasury departments from complete bankruptcy.

Columbus missed India but, unknown to him, found something much better. All the adventuresome gallants who sought a northwest passage through North America also missed India, but will Hitler and Hirohito miss it? Anyone knowing the answer can go a long way toward forecasting the outcome of the war.

With the Japanese driving in from Burma and Germany expected to slash down from the Middle East upon "the brightest jewel in the British Empire," the fate of India means more to the cause of the United Nations than many of the "everything-will-come-out-all-right" boys care to admit.

Should Hitler and the Japanese join forces in India, it would unite the two strong foes for the first time in a physical military way, and the splitting of that union would be long and costly and bloody. The union would cut apart the forces of the British Empire and endanger China.

cal impossibility to take care of all of the calls that we will have. Therefore, many will have to do without or work some other system whereby they can get their fruit and their vegetables to market as quickly as possible without using their own vehicles.

"One of the suggestions that has been made is that many of those affected in certain areas consolidate their deliveries with one large truck instead of several small ones and handle the crops in the territory in this way, thus saving the rubber on the smaller vehicles for some other necessary and essential work later on. This system would be very much like the system that is now used for picking up milk on the different routes.

Sizing Up the Enemy's Troops more than anything (that has happened).

The wealth, manpower and strategic position of India also would be lost.

Last and hardly least, if India is lost, would we have much of an argument with which to keep the Arabs, Africans, and Polynesians who are on our side still on our side?

We could keep offering them independence and keep insisting that bad as British imperialism might seem to them, the known barbarism of the Sons of Heaven and the Gestapo is a hundredfold worse. Such exhortations don't mean much, however, if you continue lying the United States flag.

This is no plea for the United States to land an expeditionary force in the land of Gandhi, the maharajas and the untouchables. We are far too busy in other corners, and the British and the Indians should by now, after Singapore and Hong Kong, realize this battle won't be won on the polo fields of Calcutta or the fashionable cocktail lounges of Bombay.

The point is that the conquest of India by the enemy would rate in many ways as the greatest disaster of the war for the United Nations. Some might welcome this dismemberment of the British Empire, but they would be cheering for the outfit all set to swat us, come the right day.

Big New Plants Pass Schedule

The Automobile Is Not Starting From Scratch

By DAVID J. WILKIE
Wide World Features

DETROIT—The automobile industry is not starting from scratch on its part of the 1942 arms production program that steps up more than tenfold the achievements of last year.

Already built and in partial or full productive activity are the largest bomber plane factory in the world, the biggest army tank arsenal ever conceived, a group of huge aviation engine factories, naval ordnance plants, and airplane sub-assembly units.

Once enlarged since Pearl Harbor, these new units are far ahead of production schedule. Tanks are rumbling off assembly lines in numbers greater than were expected for months; bomber plane sub-assemblies are being turned out even while the big plants are still being completed; and even the car makers, accustomed to mass production miracles, are surprised at the volume attained to date in aviation engine output.

And while these new plants go ahead, old auto assembly lines are being turned out to make way for airplane production.

One-time automobile manufacturers point to output records as the result of their insistence that motorcar production technique could be applied to armament manufacture. Part of that technique called for the beginning of

Union Flayed by New Dealer

Thurman Arnold Says Country Is in Their Grasp

WASHINGTON—(P)—Attacking organized labor in terms seldom, if ever, used by a New Deal official, Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, accused the unions over the week-end of a long list of misdeeds which he asserted were preventing efficient use of man and machine and hampering distribution of civilian necessities.

He charged organized labor with injuring or destroying independent business men, and holding farmers and consumers "at its mercy," of impeding distribution of housing and food, and of "undemocratic procedures" within itself.

On the witness stand of the House Judiciary Committee, Arnold said a pending bill to require registration of labor unions was inadequate to protect the public from the practices which he alleged. "No other group in our society" could do anything like the things of which he complained and escaped punishment, he said.

"Today, under federal law, there is no right of the farmer which labor is bound to respect, there is no right of the consumer which labor is bound to respect, and there is no right of the small business man which labor is bound to respect," he asserted.

Arnold said all three groups were "entirely subject to the will of the labor union. 'People complain to us and we have to say to them that there is nothing we can do.' Arnold is in charge of anti-trust prosecutions for the Justice Department.

He said state laws did not meet the situation; even if an employer was successful in obtaining an injunction against a labor organization, the labor organization could boycott the employer's goods in another state.

"Independent business men all over the United States are completely at the mercy of organized labor groups," Arnold said.

Discussing a proposal that both labor union and trade association finances must be made public, Arnold said he could not "see any reason why contributions should not be made public and I can see every reason why they should."

Charge Politics Invading Army

Some Youths Getting Commissions Unfairly, Is View

HARTFORD, Conn. — (P) — Gov. Robert A. Hurley protested today to President Roosevelt against what he charged was an unpublicized and "utterly undemocratic" method of making Army commissions available to certain youths, who thus would "possibly avoid the rigors of selective training and combatant service."

The governor, a Democrat, asserted in a letter to the president that a situation which "in my opinion gravely endangers the democratic foundations" of the selective service system had been created by the appointment "in the several New England states of committees of so-called 'civilian aides' to the chief of the Air Corps."

The governor charged that "these committees apparently operate as a screen to sift applicants for commissions" although "no publication of their functions and methods have been made, and the public in general is unaware of their activities."

Plenty of Seeds for All Victory Gardens

Is there a shortage of seeds for Victory Gardens? This question was answered at a meeting of the Victory Garden Committee of the Chicago Metropolitan Defense Area by James A. Young, executive secretary of the American Seed Trade Association in a very positive manner.

"You have only to go to the place where you usually buy your garden seeds in order to learn that anything you ask for is available," he said. "In a great majority of cases not even the prices have advanced for the quantities which are purchased by home gardeners."

The meeting at which this assurance was given by Mr. Young had been called by George T. Donoghue, who has been placed in charge of the Victory Garden campaign for the Office of Civilian Defense of the Chicago Metropolitan Defense district, which includes the city and much adjoining territory.

"The garden seed trade is accustomed to carry large reserves of seed," said Mr. Young. "There is always the possibility of a crop failure, and to protect the country from a food shortage in such event, the trade usually has on hand enough
